Biographical / Historical

Paul Dukas was born in Paris on October 1, 1865. He studied composition at the Paris Conservatoire with Ernest Guiraud; in 1928, Dukas himself became a professor of composition at the Conservatoire. Like Schumann, Debussy, and Thomson, Dukas was a prominent music critic as well as a composer. He composed a variety of works, mostly for orchestra, voice, or piano. He was not prolific, and he destroyed numerous pieces that did not meet his standards. His most frequently performed composition is The Sorcerer's Apprentice. He died in Paris on May 17, 1935.

Marguerite Hasselmans (1876–1947), daughter of the harpist and composer Alphonse Hasselmans, was a concert pianist and Gabriel Fauré's mistress and constant companion until the end of his days. She was also a close friend of Paul Dukas and Isaac Albéniz. She was beautiful and cultivated; she was interested in philosophy, she read Russian, and she behaved like a modern young woman, for example by smoking and wearing makeup in public. She was appreciated by her contemporaries for her musical talents, her conversation and her delicacy.

Scope and Contents

Paul Dukas' correspondence with Marguerite Hasselmans spans the years 1907 to 1933 and includes 86 autograph letters and 50 postcards addressed to Marguerite Hasselmans, signed with initials ("PD") or in full ("Paul Dukas"). The collection also includes three letters from Paul Dukas to Gabriel Fauré and contains 15 letters and postcards to Marguerite Hasselmans or her father Alphonse and her brother Louis, written by Paul Poujaud, Jules Massenet, Benjamin Godard, Pauline Viardot, Pierre Lalo and Camille Saint-Saëns.

Collection Contents

Series I: Paul Dukas' Correspondence, 1907-1933

86 Items (letters, 50 postcards.)

Letters are of different size, some are cross-written, some with drawings.

Letters and postcards were written from various places : Paris, Royan, Villefranche-sur-Mer, Cannes, Brussels, Fontainebleau, Salzburg and elsewhere. It is a characteristically witty series, especially in the collection of postcards, where the composer often sends a humorous line or remark, sometimes relating to the image printed on the reverse, enclosing frivolous and irreverent poems. It is also a revealing correspondence, all the more since Paul Dukas was a notably private person. This collection of letters to Marguerite Hasselmans contains intimate insights into his private and professional life, discussing his works, including Ariane et Barbe-Bleu, the symphony, la Peri amongst others ; his friendship with Albéniz (deploring his loss), Fauré, Paul Claudel, Alfred Cortot, Widor, Saint-Saëns, Jacques Durand, Florent Schmitt, Poujaud, and his family, including announcing his decision to marry Suzanne Pereyra, the death of his brother, the anniversary of his father's death and other family events; the musical life of Paris and his work as a critic. As the companion of Fauré and a musician herself, Marguerite Hasselmans was a uniquely-placed correspondent for Paul Dukas. Their correspondence continued and even intensified after Fauré's death.
