Biographical / Historical

Robert Henry Leighton (1878-1942) was the son of John Alexander Leighton (1841-1928), a solicitor in Belfast, County Antrim, Northern Ireland, and Caroline Campbell Wilson Leighton (1849-1885).

Leighton arrived in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada in April 1911 and began work at a local law firm, Harris, Bull & Mason. Let go by the firm for his inability to pay related fees, he took a job as a laborer with the Western Canada Power Company in Ruskin, British Columbia. Following the Canada Northern Railway Strike, he traveled to Skidegate, a Haida community on Graham Island. There he cleared brush, built infrastructure, worked for fisheries, and mined for gold and coal among other work. In December 1916, Leighton enlisted in the Canadian Forestry Corps and shipped out to France, arriving near the front on February 1917.

On July 11, 1924, Leighton married Winifred Charlotte Couplan (1897-1970) at Prince Rupert, British Columbia. The couple arrived in Liverpool, England, in October 1928. He died in Wandsworth, Greater London, in 1942. Winifred Charlotte Couplan Leighton returned to Canada and remarried.
