Angus MacLise

Angus MacLise was born on March 4, 1938 in Bridgeport, CT. He studied various genres of percussion and dance, performing with several ensembles before entering the downtown New York City music scene. In the early 1960s, he wrote and published poetry through Dead Language Press, which he co-founded with filmmaker Piero Heliczer. The press also published MacLise's combination calendar/poem, Year, which assigned names to each day of the year. MacLise was a member of La Monte Young's Theater of Eternal Music with John Cale, Tony Conrad, Marian Zazeela, and Terry Riley. In 1965, MacLise lived with Cale and along with him, Lou Reed and Sterling Morrison, formed the musical group The Velvet Underground. MacLise performed with them regularly throughout the year but quit in late 1965 and was replaced by Maureen Tucker. He played with them again for a few performances in 1966 when Reed was briefly hospitalized.

MacLise was a student of the occultist and mystic Aleister Crowley and under the influence of his teachings, began to blend Tibetan mysticism with his music to create sound through various drone techniques. From 1965 through the 1970s, MacLise was active in the New York City underground music scene, integrating trance, improvisation, spoken word, poetry, and electronics into his performances. He collaborated with several notable artists on multimedia projects, such as Gerard Malanga, Yoko Ono, Jonas Mekas, and Jerry Jofen. In the late 1960s, MacLise married illustrator Hetty McGee, and together they played in the musical group, Universal Mutant Repertory Company. The group did a series of performances in New York's St. Mark's Church in 1970, titled "Epiphanies." In the early 1970s, he devoted more of his time to poetry and calligraphy, and also started a literary magazine, Ting-Pa.

Later in his life, MacLise traveled to study the ethnic percussion traditions in Morocco, Turkey, Syria, Iraq, Iran, Afghanistan, Pakistan, and India with various local teachers and groups. He settled in Nepal, where he died of hypoglycemia in Kathmandu on June 21, 1979.

Scope and Contents

The Angus MacLise Sound Recordings document the musical work of Angus MacLise. The reel-to-reel audio tapes consist of experimental music performed by MacLise in solo performances and in collaboration with other musicians and artists. The sound recordings span the years 1965 to 1978.

Arrangement

Arranged according to a numbering system assigned by MacLise.

Collection Contents

Sound Recordings, 1965-1978

2 linear feet (2 boxes)

The sound recordings consist of 28 reel-to-reel audio tapes. Most tapes have been rehoused into new reel boxes by Hetty MacLise and Malanga. Original boxes are filed next to the rehoused tapes since the original boxes contain MacLise's notes. Titles have been transcribed from original boxes. Tapes 1-9, and 24 are 7.5 inch reels. Tapes 10-23 and 25 are 5 inch reels.

There are three numbered tapes at the end of the series that are in original boxes. These tapes include GM/AM numbers that do not correspond to rehoused tapes. All are 7.5 inch reels. It is not clear as to why they were assigned duplicate numbers but were not rehoused. It is possible that they were not reviewed by Hetty MacLise and Malanga.

Boxes 1 and 2 (audiovisual material): Restricted fragile. Reference copies may be requested. Consult Access Services for further information.

Sound recordings are arranged according to a numbering system assigned by MacLise, "GM/AM 001-025." "GM" stands for Gerard Malanga, who assisted Hetty MacLise in rehousing the tapes before their transfer to the Beinecke Library. "AM" stands for Angus MacLise.
