Biographical / Historical

David Brion Davis was born February 16, 1927 in Denver, Colorado to Clyde Brion and Martha Davis. He received a BA from Dartmouth College in 1950 and a PhD from Harvard University in 1956. Davis was a professor in the history department at Cornell University from 1955 to 1969 and a professor of history at Yale University from 1970 until his retirement in 2001. Davis died on April 14, 2019.

Davis's scholarship focused on the history of slavery and abolition in the western world. While at Yale University, Davis taught courses in history, served as an academic advisor, and served as the founding director of the Gilder Lehrman Center for the Study of Slavery, Resistance, and Abolition, established in 1998.

Davis is the author of numerous monographs on slavery and abolition, including the Problem of Slavery in Western Culture (1966, and winner of the 1967 Pulitzer Prize for General Non-Fiction); the Problem of Slavery in the Age of Revolution (1975); Inhuman Bondage: The Rise and Fall of Slavery in the New World (2006); and the Problem of Slavery in the Age of Emancipation (2014). Davis also authored numerous shorting writings and essays, particularly as a regular contributor to the New York Review of Books.

In addition to his teaching and writing work, Davis participated in and held leadership roles in professional organizations, including serving as the president of the Organization of American Historians from 1988 to 1989. Davis is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Antiquarian Society, and the American Philosophical Society.

Scope and Contents

The papers include correspondence, teaching files, lecture notes, writings, research files, program files, personal papers, and student recommendations of David Brion Davis, historian and professor of history at Cornell University, 1955-1969 and Yale University, 1969-2001.

Davis's research activities, centering on the history of slavery and abolition in the western world, are documented in the research files and writings. The writings also document Davis's work as a cultural critic and contributor to scholarly and popular publications, including the New York Review of Books. Davis's teaching activities at Yale University are documented in his teaching files, lecture notes, and student recommendations. His broader professional activities are documented in the program files, personal papers, and correspondence, which primarily pertains to requests for feedback on the written work and academic activities of his colleagues and students.

Accession 2017-M-0002: Additional materials, 1949–2016

This accession comprises teaching and research files, writings, correspondence, and program files documenting David Brion Davis's work as a historian of slavery and abolition in the western world and professor of history at Yale University. The teaching files document Davis's teaching activities and lectures at Yale University and other educational institutions. Writings document Davis's monographs and short writings, particularly his essays and reviews for the New York Review of Books, as well as scholarly and popular writings of others that were sent to Davis for review or comment. Correspondence primarily documents Davis's professional and research activities, and correspondence is also present throughout the research files, writings, and program files groupings. Program files include material documenting conferences Davis attended and contributed to and activities Davis undertook in the professional organizations to which he belonged. The program files also document Davis's activities as founding director of Yale University's Gilder Lehrman Center for the Study of Slavery, Resistance, and Abolition and as a Yale history professor working with researchers, undergraduate students, and graduate students at the university. The accession also contains Davis's personal papers, which document his early academic work as a student at Dartmouth College and Harvard University, his written reflections on his life and work, and his professional activities and retirement.

Researchers should note that the research and teaching files often include correspondence and writing material related to the research or teaching filing topic.

The accession was processed by Manuscripts and Archives staff in 2019. Processors identified groupings of materials based on Davis's filing system and sorted materials into those groupings. Staff made no effort to physically reorganize materials within the groupings, as they determined that Davis had, in some cases, filed related materials in physical proximity.

The accession is arranged under six headings: Teaching files, Writings, Research files, Correspondence, Program files, and Personal papers.
