Accession 2005-M-078: Additional Material, 1947, n.d

The accession contains oversized photographs of Southern Rhodesia. Some of the photographs document a visit by the British royal family in 1947 and include images of King George VI, Queen Elizabeth, and Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret. The prints show the royals inspecting the troops, relaxing with dignitaries, attending various functions, and visiting famous sites, such as the grave of Cecil Rhodes and Victoria Falls. The majority of the photographs, however, depict the landscape of Southern Rhodesia under colonialism, including images of natives, colonists, and various buildings and monuments. The accession also contains photograph descriptions, which match the order of the photographs. The images and descriptions appear to have been produced by the public relations department of Southern Rhodesia.
