Scope and Contents

The Thomas Lawrason Riggs Family Papers pertain to T. Lawrason Riggs and his grandfather, George Washington Riggs. The papers of the younger Riggs consist of correspondence, manuscript materials, and assorted other items. There are single letters from John LaFarge, Hamilton Holt, and others, while the bulk of the correspondence is with Clarence J. McCabe and Alfred A. Purcell, and concerns Joan of Arc and the book Riggs was writing about her. The manuscript of the book, manuscript notes and various research materials are also present. Other T. Lawrason Riggs papers include a manuscript of selections in Vulgate Latin prepared by Riggs for a course; a notebook containing a poem, a chronological table of Chinese, Indian, and Japanese history, and notes on medical care; a photograph possibly of Riggs, his father, and his brother; and an invitation from the White House for Riggs and his brother. Finally, there are a few miscellaneous printed items and other papers, including an invitation dating ca. 1792-1800 from John Pintard to James Murray to a masons' meeting.

Three bound volumes constitute the papers of George Washington Riggs. Included are his autograph album and commonplace book, both dating from his Yale College days, and a catalogue of the books in his library, made in 1860. These volumes are in somewhat fragile condition and should be handled with care.

The Thomas Lawrason Riggs Family papers were a gift to Yale University from the estate of T. Lawrason Riggs in 1944 and from St. Thomas More House in 1961.
