| b. 74, f. 3 | No. 307: Morrow, Edward (Yale College 1931), letter to Charles Heffelfinger Bell (Yale College 1931) | 1929 |
| | Edward "Eddie" Morrow was born on January 10, 1908 in Lend, South Dakota. Morrow transferred to Yale from the University of South Dakota in the fall of 1927 and, according to a 1988 article in The New Journal at Yale, was one of only four Black undergraduates at Yale. Morrow was a member of the Zeta Chapter of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity. He wrote the book Tales from the Harlem Woods and contributed to the Dictionary of American Negro Biography. Morrow died in New York in 1999. The letter from Morrow, an African American Yale College student, discusses his difficulty paying tuition and living expenses and requests support from Bell's father, General Mills founder James Ford Bell. The letter suggests Bell had offered Morrow financial support in the past. Morrow also notes that he was passed over for a scholarship the previous spring; he later stated in an 1988 interview with The New Journal at Yale that during his time as a student, Yale "froze [Black students] out financially, froze up their loans." | |
| b. 74, f. 4 | No. 308: Silliman, Joseph George Hannibal L. W., drawing and clippings | 1899, 1907 |
| | Born in 1837 in Connecticut, Hannibal Silliman served in company F of the 29th infantry regiment during the U.S. Civil War. By the late 1860s, he was a well-known presence on the Yale campus and had taken on the name Joseph George Hannibal L.W. Silliman, which was often stylized as the "noble and right honorable renowned and trustworthy Professor Tutor Joseph George Hannibal L. W. Silliman, Esq., M. C. (Master Confectioner)." A vendor for decades, Silliman was one of the most visible Black people on campus. A depiction of "Hannibal" is featured on a wall of Benjamin Franklin College's "Stone Ornament." Silliman died on November 10, 1907 in New Haven. The drawing was created in 1899 by Joseph George Hannibal L. W. Silliman, who was known at Yale as "Hannibal." Silliman was a well-known Black vendor who sold confectionery on campus, but was also known for a variety of talents such as drawing, boxing, and giving orations. The sketch demonstrates Silliman's ability to draw simultaneously using both hands. The newspaper clippings provide some context for his life and work, as well as insights into campus life at the time. | |
| b. 74, f. 5 | No. 309: Photographs of Yale faculty and other scholars | Circa 1890s |
| | Includes photographs of Thomas D. Seymour (Yale College), Edward Parmalee Morris (Yale College), John Henry Wright (Harvard College), Bernadotte Perrin (Yale College), Frederic De Forst Allen (Harvard College), Martin Luther d'Ooge (University of Michigan), John Williams White (Harvard College), Robert Porter Keep (Norwich Academy), Theodore Dwight Woolsey (Yale College), Thomas Anthony Thacher (Yale College), and the German scholars Friedrich Blass, Heinrich Brunn, and two unidentified people. Accompanied by explanatory material, 1960s. Separated from Ycy 1. | |
