Biographical / Historical

Kingman Brewster was born in Longmeadow, Massachusetts on June 17, 1919, the son of Kingman Brewster Sr. and Florence Foster. His parents divorced in 1923 and he and his sister settled with their mother in Cambridge, Massachusetts. His mother married Edward Ballentine, a Harvard University music professor. Brewster attended the Belmont Hill School, where he participated in debate and drama. Before entering Yale University as an undergraduate student, Brewster traveled to Europe with his family. He attended Yale College from 1937 to 1941, where he was chairman of the Yale Daily News and was involved in the America First campaign, protesting America's involvement in World War II.

After the attacks on Pearl Harbor, Brewster enlisted. He served as a Naval aviator and flew anti-submarine patrols in South America for three years. After the war ended, he attended Harvard Law School, where he served on the Harvard Law Review. He graduated magna cum laude in 1948. Following graduation, he went to Paris and served as assistant general counsel to Milton Katz, the United States Special Representative in Europe for the Economic Cooperation Administration. Thereafter he accepted a position in the economics department at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In 1950, Brewster was appointed assistant professor at Harvard Law School. He was promoted to full professor in 1953. While at Harvard, he became a noted expert on antitrust matters and international commerce and relations. His well-received publications included Antitrust and American Business Abroad, published in 1958, and The Law of International Transactions and Relations: Cases and Materials, co-authored with Milton Katz and published in 1960.

In 1960, Brewster returned to Yale University as provost under Yale president, A. Whitney Griswold, who had taught at Yale when Brewster was a student and was a friend of Brewster's parents. After Griswold died from cancer in 1963, Brewster became acting Yale University president and was named president in October. He was inaugurated in April 1964.

Brewster led the university through significant and controversial changes to the faculty, student body, and curricula. For a summary of the work of his presidential administration and the records that document it, see: Guide to the Kingman Brewster, Jr., President of Yale University, Records.

In May 1977, Brewster left Yale to become Ambassador to the Court of St. James's in the United Kingdom. He served as ambassador until 1981 and was well-liked by the British with whom he regularly interacted. He travelled throughout the country to meet people and noted that his job was to try "to advise my Government on British attitudes and concerns in the fullest way possible." After the ambassadorship ended, Brewster returned to New Haven, and worked for the New York-based law firm of Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam, and Roberts. He also served as chairman of the English Speaking Union of the United States, a group that sponsors cultural and educational opportunities for students and educators. He was active in other organizations, serving in positions with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Reuters, Common Cause, and the American Council of Learned Societies. In 1984, he returned to London as resident partner for his law firm. In 1985, he was elected Master of University College at Oxford, an unusual position for an American to hold. He died at the age of 69 on November 8, 1988.

Brewster married Mary Louise Phillips in Jacksonville, Florida in 1942. Mary Louise was a Vassar College student and had met Brewster at a Yale football game. They had five children together: Kingman Brewster III, Constance, Deborah, Alden, and Riley.

Scope and Contents

The papers primarily document the personal and professional life of Brewster as a Harvard faculty member (1950-1960) and Ambassador to Great Britain (1977-1981). The papers also include informative (but limited) material from 1940 to 1950. The most substantive material in the collection is that created by Brewster himself. Correspondence, unpublished writings, speeches, and interviews, provide extensive documentation of his interests and expertise, including in the areas of the role of government; maintaining a viable center in the political opinion spectrum; American anti-trust laws; American companies doing business abroad; the role of a liberal arts higher education; Anglo-American relations; and the United States in world affairs. The documentation on Brewster as ambassador reflects the public side of his work. Internal Embassy discussions on issues or policies, planning for incident responses, and interactions with the US State Department, are not documented in the papers.

Records, including correspondence and speeches, documenting Brewster's tenures as Provost and President can be found in the Yale University Archives (see Related Materials note).

Arrangement

The papers are arranged in six series: I. Correspondence, 1904-1984. II. Personal, 1866-1989. III. Professional, 1936-1989. IV. Writings, 1940-1988. V. Photographs, 1940-1988. VI. Clippings and Interviews, 1940-1986.

Collection Contents

Series I: Correspondence, 1904–1984

Series I consists chiefly of correspondence between Kingman Brewster and Mary Louise Phillips Brewster from 1941 (post-Yale graduation) to 1944, and correspondence to and from one or both of them covering 1946 to 1960 and 1977 to 1984. The most substantive correspondence is written by Kingman between 1941 and 1960. This correspondence documents his thoughts about his career, the development of his political philosophy, and early connections with persons, including Roger Baldwin, McGeorge Bundy, Ray Garrett Jr, and L. Douglas Heck, who later became significant figures in politics, law, and business. It also provides information about his tenure with the Economic Cooperation Administration. The 1977 to 1984 correspondence is mostly incoming and social in nature.

Arranged under six subseries, primarily by family member: A. Kingman Brewster Jr., B. Mary Louise Phillips Brewster, C. Kingman Brewster and Mary Louise Phillips Brewster, D. Kingman Brewster, Sr., E. Other Family Correspondence, and F. Holiday Cards.

Series II: Personal, 1866–1989, bulk 1950–1980

Series II contains little information on Brewster's years as a Yale undergraduate and the months after graduation prior to his enlistment. The Pre-Military subseries, however, includes a copy of his Yale College senior essay. His 1941 class oration and several other speeches he gave while a Yale student, can be found in the Speeches files in Series IV. The Harvard, Economic Cooperation Association (ECA), and Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) subseries includes only scattered materials on the ECA and MIT; some MIT materials are also found in Harvard files. The subseries, however, includes interesting materials, although limited in number, of Brewster's work towards establishing a world government organization. The Organizations and Family subseries document the more personal and social lives of the Brewster family.

Arranged under five subseries: A. Pre-Military; B. Harvard, Economic Cooperation Association (ECA), and Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT); C. Harvard Law Student; D. Organizations; and E. Family.

Series III: Professional, 1936–2008

Series III is arranged in four subseries that reflect the four divisions of Brewster's professional career. Brewster's interests in the international spheres of law, business, trade, and government is reflected throughout the Harvard Law Faculty subseries. The Straus Group and Economic Cooperation Administration files that document discussions on government financing for investment abroad are an excellent example, as are the files on the Organization for European Economic Cooperation that document relationships between government officials and foreign businessmen. His correspondence files, while including passing reference to personal or Law School administrative work, primarily focus on his teaching and research on the effect of U.S. anti-trust laws on U.S. businesses abroad. Brewster was an active faculty member and there are interesting files on work undertaken to revise the Harvard Law School curricula under "Legal education," and to study the interaction between law and behavioral sciences under "Ford study." There is substantive material on the activities of the American Association of University Professors at the national and locals level during his Harvard tenure. Brewster's files on the Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts (CLUM) not only document his involvement in social justice issues, but provide an interesting snapshot of its work during the contentious McCarthy era. The order in which the files were received has been retained.

The small Yale subseries is arranged alphabetically and includes files of a personal nature and those on various organizations and societies to which Brewster belonged. For documentation of Brewster's years at Yale as provost and president, the researcher is directed to record groups in the Yale University Archives (see Related Materials note).

The General Files of the Ambassador subseries, arranged alphabetically, include calendars that when used with speeches and interviews from Series IV and VI provide a substantive overview of Brewster's public activities as Ambassador. There are many files throughout the series that document the places he visited and events he attended as ambassador. Correspondence files are mostly incoming and pertain primarily to social and personal matters.

The Post-Ambassador subseries, arranged alphabetically, provides a broad look at the kinds of issues Brewster dealt with when working with Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam, and Roberts. They demonstrate his continuing interests in American anti-trust laws and investments by businesses in areas other than their home countries. There are only a few files related to University College at Oxford, but they provide some insight into University financial matters he needed to address.

Arranged under four subseries: A. Harvard Law School Faculty, B. Yale University, C. Ambassador, and D. Post-Ambassador.

Series IV: Writings, 1940–1988

The most interesting materials in the Books subseries, arranged alphabetically by title, are drafts of an unpublished book by Brewster, "The Persistent Agenda of a Voluntary Society." The book, written by Brewster in the early 1980s, is a series of essays on how society can encourage freedom of choice for its citizens. It includes a revealing and informative autobiographical introduction. The Speeches subseries, arranged chronologically, documents the pre- and post-Yale years in Brewster's career and is quite extensive for his Ambassador years.

The series is arranged in four subseries: A. Articles, B. Books, C. Short Writings, and D. Speeches.

Series VI: Clippings and Interviews, 1940–1986

Along with Speeches in Series IV, materials in this series document Brewster's public persona as Ambassador. The Clippings are mostly arranged alphabetically by publication title and are reflections on Brewster's ambassadorship by British journalists and commentators. The Interviews subseries consists of audio and video-recorded interviews and are arranged chronologically. They only cover his Ambassador years, but are quite extensive. Along with his speeches, they are valuable in documenting how Brewster shaped conversations in Britain about the United States in world affairs and the relationship between the United States and Great Britain.

Arranged under two headings: Clippings and Interviews.
