Biographical / Historical

Gay & Lesbian Advocates & Defenders (GLAD), located in Boston, Massachusetts, was founded in 1978 by attorney John Ward and a group of New England lawyers and activists. Ward founded GLAD in response to the Boston Police Department's entrapment of over 100 gay patrons in the Boston Public Library. The event would become the foundation of GLAD's first case, Doe v. McNiff.

Best known for its litigation of the Massachusetts case Goodridge v. Dept. of Public Health, which established for the first time the right of same-sex couples to marry, GLAD was one of the first legal organizations in the United States dedicated solely to defending the rights of gay men and lesbians. Originally established to fight attacks and discrimination against the gay, lesbian and bisexual community, GLAD has, over time, expanded its mission to include transgender people and people with HIV. In 1985, GLAD launched the AIDS Law Project with the purpose of fighting AIDS-related discrimination, and in the early 1990s, it established the Civil Rights Project to focus on civil rights issues in the gay and lesbian community. GLAD rewrote its mission statement in 2000 to include the eradication of discrimination based on "gender identity and expression," in addition to "sexual orientation and HIV status," which led to the formal creation of the Transgender Rights Project in 2008. GLAD has also been committed to educating the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community, the legal community, and the general public about the legal and civil rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender people, and of people with HIV.

Located in Boston since its inception, GLAD has primarily served the six New England states: Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont. It divides its work into three major functions: Legal, Public Affairs & Education, and Development. The Legal department handles litigation and other legal matters and does most of GLAD's legislative work. The Public Affairs & Education department fulfills GLAD's mission to educate the public, while the Development department is responsible for generating funds to maintain and grow GLAD's operations, which are primarily supported by donations.

Although GLAD is a thriving and influential organization, its establishment as a small organization run by volunteers has heavily influenced its administrative history. The organization is governed by a board of directors and run by an executive director, who is responsible for day-to-day operations. John Ward served as its first executive director until 1983. In that year, Kathy Travers became the second executive director of GLAD and its first full-time, paid employee. In 1984, attorney Kevin Cathcart took over the position, which he held for eight years. Throughout the 1980s, GLAD's staff remained small, and the executive director was responsible for all of GLAD's operations. GLAD relied on its relationships with outside attorneys to handle many of its cases. The office manager position became a full-time paid position in 1986, around the same time that GLAD hired its first staff attorney, Denise McWilliams, to direct the AIDS Law Project. The hiring of McWilliams increased the size of the full-time staff to three. By 1990, the full-time staff had grown to five with the addition of a development director in 1988 and another staff attorney, Mary Bonauto, in 1990. During the 1990s, GLAD continued to grow and had several executive directors: Josephine Ross (1992-1993), Jan Platner (1993-1995), Amelia Craig (1995-1997), and Gary Buseck (1997-2003). In times when the position was left vacant, GLAD staff attorneys Denise McWilliams (in 1992), Mary Bonauto (in 1995), and Bennett Klein (in 1997) stepped in as acting executive director. In 2005, Lee Swislow became the executive director. By 2010 GLAD had a staff of thirty, including eight attorneys, two distinct departments serving GLAD's development and public affairs/education needs, and a budget of $3.1 million.

Some of GLAD's notable cases include Doe v. McNiff (1978); Babets v. Johnston (1985), which addressed the right of same-sex couples to become foster parents; Bragdon v. Abbott (1995), which established that people living with HIV/AIDS are protected under the Federal Americans with Disabilities Act; Rosa v. Park West Bank (2000) and Doe v. Yunits (2000), both of which affirmed the right of transgender people to legal protection against discrimination; Baker v. Vermont (1999), which led to the creation of civil unions in Vermont; and Goodridge v. Dept. of Public Health (2003) and Kerrigan & Mock v. Dept. of Public Health (2008), which together established same-sex marriage in their respective states of Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Scope and Contents

The records document the organization and activities of the Gay & Lesbian Advocates & Defenders (GLAD), a nonprofit legal organization dedicated to defending the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender individuals and people with HIV, primarily in New England. The collection primarily consists of correspondence, topical files, reports, meeting minutes, legal research, litigation and amicus files, publications, volunteer and training manuals, and news clippings created or maintained by GLAD. The records document all aspects of the organization, including its history, structure, and activities from its founding in 1978 to the present. The collection provides a rich resource for the study of GLAD, anti-discrimination efforts, and the legal issues facing lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender people and people with HIV in the United States.

Material on GLAD's founding and history are found in the collection, as is material related to the administration of the organization. The Board of Directors and Executive Director files include committee reports, a complete set of meeting minutes and packets, correspondence, and topical files providing a rich overview of GLAD's activities. Financial records consist of auditor, public charity, and general budget reports, which provide information about GLAD's financial status and growth over the years. Legal files consist of reports and litigation and amicus files, documenting only a few of the cases in which GLAD was involved. The Public Affairs files provide substantive information which can be used to reconstruct GLAD's history and more generally the history of the legal status of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender individuals and people with HIV in the United States. Of particular note are GLAD's publications and the news clippings they maintained. The Education files include documentation on GLAD's educational and outreach missions, including its Lawyer Referral Service, InfoLine (a phone based guidance and referral service), forums, and presentations. The Development files document fundraising. In addition to the records generated by GLAD, the collection includes a substantial number of newsletters, flyers, and brochures (Non-GLAD Publications) of various local and national lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender organizations (usually only a few items per organization). While not comprehensive, the non-GLAD publications provide a glimpse of the lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender activist milieu primarily from the 1980s and 1990s.

Arrangement

The records are organized in five series: I. Administration, 1975-2006. II. Legal, 1990-2008. III. Public Affairs & Education, 1976-2010. IV. Development, 1982-2003. V. Non-GLAD Publications, 1973-2006. There are also six additions, including a large addition of legal department materials that accounts for approximately 85% of the collection.

Collection Contents

Series I: Administration, 1975-2006

12.92 linear feet (31 containers)

The series consists of records documenting GLAD's administration. It is divided into four sections: Board of Directors; Executive Director; Finance; and Office Administration. The board records consist primarily of minutes, committee records and "packets" which contain documents provided to the board summarizing the work of GLAD's various committees and departments. The packets provide an overview of various administrative, legal, financial, outreach and organizational matters before GLAD at any given moment. Executive Director files contain correspondence, topical files, notes, memoranda, articles, and reports. The early records of the executive director contain documentation and information that would later (circa 1990) be filed under Development and Public Affairs & Education.

Series III: Public Affairs and Education, 1976-201013.0 linear feet (34 containers)*

The series documents the public affairs and education activities of GLAD, both before and after the establishment of a formal Public Affairs & Education department circa 1990. Of particular interest are GLAD's annual reports and a near-complete run of GLAD Briefs, GLAD's public outreach newsletter, which has been published continually since 1979. The series also contains records documenting strategic planning and public affairs administration; a large number of GLAD publications, used primarily for public education; news clippings primarily related to GLAD's cases and issues of interest to GLAD; materials relating to the Infoline and Lawyer Referral Service. The series also contains a substantial number of files documenting anti-gay and lesbian voter initiatives in Maine and efforts to block them.

The series is arranged in six sections: Public Affairs, Education, Maine, Speaking engagements, Volunteers, and Coalitions.

Accession 2015-M-014: Additional material, 1975–199919.83 linear feet (48 containers)*

Materials in this series pertain to Bragdon v. Abbott, which was the first court case concerning the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) to be heard by the United States Supreme Court, as well as the first case involving HIV to be heard by the court. The case originated in Bangor, Maine in 1994, when dentist Randon Bragdon refused to treat Sidney Abbott at his practice after Abbott disclosed that she was HIV positive. GLAD filed suit on Abbott's behalf in federal district court in Maine in 1995, asserting that Abbott's HIV positive status qualified as a disability, and that Bragdon's refusal of service qualified as discrimination under the ADA. GLAD won this case, known as Abbott v. Bragdon, after which Bragdon's attorneys appealed the decision at the First Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston, where GLAD also won. Bragdon ultimately appealed to the United States Supreme Court, which ruled 5-4 in Abbott's favor in 1998. Materials documenting the case include correspondence, news clippings, memos, background research materials, notes, depositions, briefs, summary judgements, court decisions, and reports.

Accession 2017-M-035: Additional material, 1984–2016, bulk 2000–200710.08 linear feet (22 containers)*

This accession documents three major projects GLAD worked on from 2000 to 2007. Cote-Whitacre, et al v. Department of Public Health ruled on recognition of same-sex marriages performed in Massachusetts by other states. The case files include pleadings, case documents, related research, and amicus curiae briefs. These cover all stages of Cote-Whitacre, et al and its related case, also filed by GLAD, Johnstone, et al v. Thomas O'Reilly. Nancy Walsh's claim to the September 11th Victim Compensation Fund of 2001 for her domestic partner, Carol Flyzik, includes documentation pertaining to their domestic partnership; Flyzik's personal records; correspondence with GLAD, the law firm Kreindler and Kreindler, and the families of Walsh and Flyzik; applications to the September 11th Victim Compensation Fund of 2001; and court documents. There are also drafts and newspaper clippings relating to H. 0847, the Vermont state bill that created civil unions for same-sex couples. Finally, there are publicity materials for different GLAD fundraising events from 1984 to 2016, including fliers and posters.

The accession is arranged under four headings: Cote-Whitacre, et al v. Department of Health case files, Walsh case files, Vermont civil union legislation, and GLAD event publicity materials. Within these headings, materials are arranged as received from the donor.

The Legal Department addition consists of legal documents and supporting materials for GLAD's LGBTQ and HIV/AIDS civil rights litigation work from the early 1980s through 2018. The materials document the momentous changes to LGBTQ- and HIV/AIDS-related law, public policy, and social attitudes during this time, and demonstrate GLAD's role in the advancement of LGBTQ civil rights.

The records in this series comprise the majority of the overall collection - approximately 85%. This indicates the significance of litigation and the use of the legal system in GLAD's mission to end "discrimination based on sexual orientation, HIV status, and gender identity and expression."

Within this series are materials related to GLAD's most notable legal efforts, including: - Baker v. Vermont, which in 2000 led to the establishment of same-sex civil unions in Vermont. - Goodridge v. Department of Public Health, which legalized same-sex marriage in Massachusetts in 2003. - Kerrigan v. Commissioner of Public Health, which in 2008 legalized same-sex marriage in Connecticut. - Gill v. Office of Personnel Management, a 2012 case in which the First Circuit Court of Appeals invalidated Section 3 of the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA). After the ruling the Bipartisan Legal Advisory Group (BLAG), a group in the U.S. House of Representative that defended DOMA against GLAD's suit, asked the Supreme Court to review the case. The Supreme Court ultimately declined to do so in favor of hearing Windsor v. United States, which ultimately affirmed the decision in Gill. Gill was likely not selected because Justice Elena Kagan would have had to recuse herself, as she had discussed legal strategies surrounding the case while an employee of the Department of Justice. - DeBoer v. Snyder, filed in 2012 in a Michigan district court; one of four cases which would eventually be consolidated into Obergefell v. Hodges, which in 2015 legalized same-sex marriage at the federal level. - Hurley v. Irish American Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Group of Boston, a landmark 1995 Supreme Court case in which reversed several Massachusetts lower court decisions which had affirmed the right of gays and lesbians to participate in public demonstrations such as the Boston St. Patrick's Day Parade. The reversal was based on the argument that the first amendment protected the parade sponsor's right to limit participation in their event. While GLAD lost the case, it marked the first time that an openly gay attorney, GLAD's John Ward, argued in front of the Supreme Court. It also garnered significant media attention which furthered public discussion of LGBTQ rights in the United States. - O'Donnabhain v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, a 2010 case brought to the United States Tax Court which established that treatment for gender dysphoria qualifies as medical treatment under the U.S. Tax Code and thus is tax deductible. - Boy Scouts of America v. Wyman, a 2003 Connecticut case which established that the BSA could not participate in a state charitable campaign unless it endorsed a policy of non-discrimination - AIDS Support Group of Cape Cod ASGCC v. Town of Barnstable, a 2017 case which affirmed the legality of needle access programs in Massachusetts.

Approximately 20 linear feet of materials related to Bragdon v. Abbot, which in 1995 established that people living with HIV and AIDS are protected under the American's with Disabilities Act (ADA), are located in Accession 2015-M-014, as they were donated and made available earlier than the materials in this addition. Materials related to Fricke v. Lynch, the first case litigated by GLAD in 1980, are not included in this collection.

GLAD organized their litigation efforts into two major projects, the AIDS Law Project (ALP) and the Civil Rights Project (CRP), and the records of both of these projects are included in this series. Additionally, the series includes the records of the Transgender Rights Project (TRP), which began as part of the Civil Rights Project before being established as its own unit in 2008.

The Civil Rights project records also include a group of materials related to the legalization of same-sex marriage at the state and federal level. The approximately 20 marriage equality cases litigated by GLAD - or on which GLAD attorneys consulted or otherwise participated - are included in this group, as they were clearly seen by GLAD as being part of a single, organized effort to legalize same-sex marriage in the United States. Materials related to other rights of same-sex couples (i.e. joint adoption and guardianship of children) are included in the general Civil Rights Project files and are identified by a cross-reference.

Regardless of the project of which they were a part, most of the materials in this series fall into a few categories based on their function within the legal department. The majority of the materials are case files - records which were created during the course of, or in direct support of, legal cases in which GLAD was involved. More than 100 cases are documented in these records. The issues at stake in these cases include job and housing discrimination related to sexual orientation and HIV status, adoption by same-sex couples, harassment by law enforcement, and the rights of LGBTQ and HIV-affected individuals and groups within the United States legal, health care and school systems.

The case files include formally-submitted legal documents and official rulings, as well as research materials, correspondence, notes, drafts, and other records which provide insight into the processes by which GLAD lawyers developed their arguments. The amount of material varies across case files. Some cases, especially those in which GLAD was highly involved, span across numerous boxes, while others are represented by a single folder. Typically these are cases in which GLAD lawyers were not directly involved, such as those in which they only submitted an amicus curiae brief or provided consultation or legal advice.

A second major category of materials are "resource" files, which consist of a wide variety of subject files and research materials. Two sets of resource files are included in the series, one for the Civil Rights Project and one for the AIDS Law Project. The material is grouped by topic, and organized according to numerical organizational schemes devised by the GLAD legal department. There are no resource files for the Transgender Rights project.

Supporting materials for marriage equality cases are called "work files." These files are somewhat different from resource files, however, in that they contain significant amounts of correspondence, notes, drafts, and other materials that were used by GLAD attorneys in developing their overall strategy for the invalidation of DOMA and the legalization of same-sex marriage. While there is some overlap between the materials contained in resource files, work files, and case files, resource and work files are usually concerned with topics and themes that span across multiple cases.

Similar to the resource files, though maintained separately, are small groups of "policy files," which are also grouped topically, though are focused more on public policy and legislative advocacy than litigation and legal theory. For instance, included in the policy files grouping for the Civil Rights Project is material related to GLAD's Maine education campaign, which was formed after the 2009 repeal of a same-sex marriage law in that state. Policy file sets exist for the CRP, ALP, and TRP projects.

Finally, within this series there is a small group of administrative files, which primarily contain materials related to departmental planning and strategy.

All materials have been designated by GLAD as either "public" or "work-product." Work-product materials are classified as such according to the "work-product doctrine", which protects from legal discovery processes any materials which were prepared by GLAD lawyers or the parties they represent as part of litigation or trial preparation.

All materials identified as "work-product" include that phrase in the title. The public documents have no restrictions, and include all materials which do not have "work-product" in the title.

Work-product files are restricted until January 1, 2043. Researchers must receive permission in writing from GLAD to access work-product materials.

|   | This grouping consists of a set of subject files, called "resource files" by GLAD attorneys, which were used to support the work of the AIDS Law Project. The files include GLAD research on laws and legal issues, such as needle exchange laws and duty to warn laws, which disproportionately affect those with HIV and AIDS. The materials also include overviews of HIV-related statutes by geographic location, with a focus on states in New England. GLAD attorneys devised a numbering scheme to organize these files. There are some gaps in the numbering, suggesting that other resource files that no longer exist or were misfiled. |           |

Civil Rights Project records

This grouping contains the records of the Civil Rights Project, a project within the GLAD Legal Department focused on affirming the civil rights of LGBTQ individuals and groups. The Civil Rights project was formally established by GLAD circa 1990 with Mary Bonauto as Director.

Civil Rights Project cases encompass a variety of issues affecting the LGBTQ community, including adoption and guardianship by same-sex couples, discrimination and harassment by law enforcement, discrimination in the school, health care, and legal systems, the rights of of LGBTQ individuals and groups to participate in public life, and the rights of LGBTQ employees, among other issues. The majority of the cases were argued in courts in New England.

Some notable cases include: Babets v. Johnston, Barrett v. Fontbonne, Boy Scouts of America v. Wyman, Hurley v. Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Group of Boston, Miller-Jenkins v. Miller-Jenkins, Parker v. Hurley, and Pulsifer v. Portland.

The majority of the records in this group are case files which were created in direct support of GLAD’s litigation efforts. This includes cases argued by GLAD attorneys as well as cases where GLAD submitted an amicus curiae brief or offered legal advice.

Other materials included in this grouping are sets of “resource” and “policy” files which were created and maintained by GLAD to support background research into civil rights issues affecting the LGBTQ community. They are focused on broad topics rather than particular cases, though many resource files do contain information about cases which fall under a particular topic.

Also contained within the Civil Rights Project grouping are materials related to the Transgender Rights Project and GLAD’s efforts to legalize same-sex marriage at both the state and federal levels. The Transgender Rights project was originally part of the Civil Rights Project before being established as its own project in 2008. Materials in the Transgender Rights Project files primarily consist of case files, but also include a small amount of policy files related to state “bathroom bills” and gender-affirming drivers’ licenses.

Finally, a significant portion of materials in the Civil Rights Project group consist of records related to GLAD’s major marriage equality litigation. The marriage equality files contain a mixture of case files linked to specific litigation and more general “work files,” which include supporting materials created by GLAD attorneys when developing an overall legal strategy for state and federal marriage equality cases.

Case files
 108.75 linear feet (279 containers) 1980–2018

This grouping is comprised of case files for GLAD’s civil rights project, not including marriage equality. The case files include court documents, research materials, correspondence, notes, and a variety of other materials.

Resource files

Resource files, as they were called by GLAD attorneys, are a set of subject files used by GLAD attorneys in the course of their legal research. Rather than being related to a particular case, the files are organized around a broad set of topics, such as family, relationships, discrimination, religion, and violence. GLAD developed a detailed organizational scheme for these materials, and most of these groupings include common subgroupings: relevant case summaries, law reviews, studies and articles, research, and press materials. Not all of the topics include all of these subgroupings, and some contain additional subgroupings relevant only to that particular topic. A listing of all topics present in the Civil Rights project resource file set is below. The AIDS Law Project also compiled a set of resource files, but the organization scheme differs from that used for the CRP resource files.

Marriage Equality records

The materials in this grouping are comprised of case files and supporting "work files" for GLAD's efforts at legalizing same-sex marriage at both the state and federal levels.

The majority of the materials in this grouping are case files which were created to directly support GLAD's litigation in specific cases. The remaining materials are "work files" which were created by GLAD attorneys as part of the process of devising an overall legal strategy for marriage equality in the United States.

|                | Case files102.58 linear feet (251 containers)A significant percentage of the marriage equality case files are interrelated. GLAD clearly viewed their work on these cases to be part of a single, larger mission to repeal the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA) and legalize same-sex marriage. As such, many of the cases can be viewed as being in tandem, albeit litigated separately in various states in New England. A number of other related cases are present within the case files for the larger Civil Rights Project of which the marriage equality cases are a subset. | 1997–2017             |

Work files consist of materials that are related to GLAD’s arguments for marriage equality but that are not necessarily concerned with a particular case. They are similar to resource and policy files found in other groupings, though often contain more drafts, correspondence and other materials which document the thought processes behind GLAD’s legal arguments in favor of same-sex marriage.

The work files grouping includes several subgroupings: state-specific work files, attorney-specific work files, international/national/regional/DOMA-related work files, and press files.

State-specific work files are comprised of research materials and other supporting documents which document litigation related to same-sex marriage at the state level, primarily in New England.

Attorney-specific work files were maintained by individual attorneys as part of their work towards the legalization of same-sex marriage. The largest portion of the material was created and maintained by Mary Bonauto, the Civil Rights Project director. Bonauto was involved in most of the marriage equality cases which are documented in the Marriage Equality grouping, and was instrumental in devising legal arguments for same-sex marriage in both the state and federal court systems.

International/national/regional/DOMA-related work files are concerned with marriage at the federal and international levels. The majority of the documents in this grouping are concerned with legal arguments for invalidating the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA).

Marriage-related press files include a variety of newspaper and magazine articles related to same-sex marriage decisions in the state and federal courts. They serve as a record of the media’s reaction to GLAD’s litigation efforts.

Transgender Rights Project records
18.0 linear feet (44 containers) 2000–2016

The Transgender Rights Project (TRP) was formally established as a sub-project of the Civil Rights Project in 2008. Prior to that time cases related to transgender rights were litigated by the larger Civil Rights Project. These earlier cases are noted with a cross-reference to the TRP. As with the Civil Rights Project and AIDS Law Project files, the majority of TRP files are related to specific cases.

There are no TRP-specific resource files, though a significant number of transgender-related resource files can be found among the resource files of the larger Civil Rights Project. There is a small grouping of Transgender Rights Project policy files, primarily related to “bathroom bills” and to issues related to changing gender identification on driver’s licenses and other official documents.

Case files

Transgender Rights Project case files include materials relating to a variety of GLAD’s transgender-rights litigation in New England since 2008, including the treatment of gender dysphoria and the right of transgender people to obtain gender-affirming drivers licenses and other official documents.

As with other case files, materials found in Transgender Rights Project case files include depositions, notes, correspondence, press materials, pleadings, decisions, briefs, case histories, precent research, rulings, complaints, filings, police and incident reports, motions, exhibits and evidence, research materials, offprints of articles and book chapters, memoranda, drafts of arguments, reports, court orders, interviews, petitions, procedural documents, affidavits, appeals, and a variety of other materials created in support of litigation.

Some notable Transgender Rights Project cases included in this grouping are: O’Donnabhain v. IRS, Doe v. Clenchy, and Freeman v. Denny’s.
