Charles Hill Papers (MS 2070). Manuscripts and Archives, Yale University Library.

Biographical / Historical

Charles Hill was born on April 28, 1936. Hill attended Brown University and graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in 1957. He then received a juris doctorate and Master of Arts degree in American studies from the University of Pennsylvania in 1960 and 1961. Hill's lengthy tenure in the State Department began in 1963 working as a vice council in Zurich, Switzerland; he was then assigned to Taichung, Taiwan as a Chinese language officer, and made a political officer in Hong Kong in 1966. In 1970, Hill was appointed a fellow at the East Asia Research Center at Harvard University. Hill then turned down a diplomatic assignment in South Vietnam in the Civil Operations and Rural Development Support (CORDS) but was reassigned to an embassy post in South Vietnam in 1971. He returned to the United States in July 1973, and began a short stint working for the assistant secretary of Cultural Affairs, writing policy documents and briefs on U.S.-China relations. This position lasted a few months, whereupon Hill became a close aide to Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and played a central role in negotiations over the Panama Canal treaties. In 1974, Hill became part of the policy planning staff within the State Department, as well as a speechwriter and advisor for then Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. This began a longstanding professional relationship and personal friendship between Hill and Kissinger. During the Jimmy Carter administration, Hill worked in the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv. A series of appointments in the Middle East followed: one as director of Arab-Israeli affairs, and the other as Deputy Assistant Secretary for the Middle East. Hill was then appointed executive aide to George Shultz in 1985, a position he served until 1989. After teaching at Cornell University as a Clark Fellow, Hill went on to advise the Secretary General of the United Nations, Boutros Boutros-Gali, from 1992 to 1996.

After leaving the U.N. (and public service) in 1996, Hill turned to a career in university teaching. Hill taught at Stanford University from 1995 to 1998, and has taught at Yale University since 1998. He authored two books in this time: Grand Strategies: Literature, Statecraft, and World Order (2010), and Trial of a Thousand Years: World Order and Islamism (2011). Along with Paul Kennedy and John Lewis Gaddis, Hill was a founding member of the Brady-Johnson Program in Grand Strategy at Yale University, where he was appointed a senior lecturer and diplomat-in-residence. Charles Hill died on March 27, 2021 in New Haven, Connecticut.

Correspondence

Series I consists of correspondence to and from Charles Hill. Correspondence primarily consists of emails printed by Hill, and is with individuals affiliated with Yale. Notable correspondents include Fouad Ajami, Elizabeth Bradley, David Brooks, William F. Buckley, Jr., John Lewis Gaddis, Paul Kennedy, James Mattis, and Norma Thompson. Much of the correspondence to Hill solicits his thoughts on domestic and world affairs, grand strategy, literature, and the discipline of history. Student correspondence is also in Series I; and this correspondence conveys Yale students' appreciation for Hill--for the academic rigor of his courses and the intellectual influence he had upon them.

Research Materials and Subject Files

Series III comprises research materials and subject files. These files were compiled by Hill and used as research for talks, writings, and courses; they also functioned as general reference files on topics of interest to Hill. Many of these files consist of published materials—either articles, chapters, and clippings Hill copied or removed from publications—but also include correspondence, notes, and photographs. A few folders contain talks and lectures given by Hill.

Series IV includes materials pertaining to Hill's lectures and talks. The talks document Hill's presentations to venues outside of Yale, while the lectures are often given by Hill at Yale, but outside of his classes. Some folders contain outlines of lectures and talks, rather than a written paper or a formal presentation. The series also includes research materials related to the subject of the lectures and talks.

Writings

Series V contains drafts of Hill's articles and books. Hill often wrote his essays by hand at first; and few of them required extensive editing before publication. Hill's "notes" contain drafts of articles, his thoughts on current events, and writing exercises. Also included are drafts of Hill's book, Grand Strategies, as well as an unpublished manuscript on Sigmund Freud entitled The Importance of Untenable Theories. The series also contains ideas and drafts of chapters for the book World Order by Henry Kissinger. There are also several files of handwritten notes, essays, and articles on various topics, but particularly on world affairs and grand strategy.

Notebooks

Series VI contains copies of Hill's notebooks kept during his tenure in the United States State Department from 1978-1989. The notebooks chronicle events confronting the administration of Ronald Reagan and offer a detailed overview of decision-making on diplomacy and U.S. foreign policy. Hill later reviewed the notebooks and attached post-it notes to mark the subjects of the entries. Copies of these post-it notes appear in this series. No notebooks exist between the years 1980-1982. Notebooks maintained by Hill for 1987 are not present in the collection and are presumably lost.
