Processing Information

Collections are processed to a variety of levels, depending on the work necessary to make them usable, their perceived research value, the availability of staff, competing priorities, and whether or not further accruals are expected. The library attempts to provide a basic level of preservation and access for all collections as they are acquired, and does more extensive processing of higher priority collections as time and resources permit.

This collection received a basic level of processing, including rehousing, minimal organization, and box-level description in 2013. Fuller processing, including arrangement work and more granular description, was provided in 2018.

Folder titles appearing in the contents list below are often based on those provided by the creator or previous custodian. Titles in quotation marks are transcriptions of original labels appearing on topical files. Otherwise, folder titles are supplied by staff during initial processing. Jacqueline de Jong

Jacqueline de Jong (1939-), is a Dutch artist. She was associated with the social, political, and artistic movements Internationale situationniste and Gruppe SPUR during the 1960s, and served as editor of The Situationist Times from 1962 to 1967.

De Jong was born in 1939 in Hengelo, Netherlands, to art collectors Hans and Alice de Jong. De Jong and her mother found refuge in Switzerland during World War II, after which they returned to the Netherlands. In 1958, De Jong obtained a position at the Stedelijk Museum, a contemporary arts institution located in Amsterdam. Her parents' collecting and her experience at the museum exposed her to current artistic movements, including the Internationale situationniste (I.S.), recently formed by French intellectual Guy Debord and Danish artist Asger Jorn. Jorn had also been a founding member of the earlier avant-garde movements CoBrA (1948-1951) and International Movement for an Imaginist Bauhaus (1955-1957). De Jong and Jorn first met in 1958, and were romantic partners through the 1960s. De Jong herself joined the I.S. in 1960 and participated to the movement's fourth conference in London in September of that year. Though one of few women in the movement's inner circle, she assumed the leadership of its Dutch section.

De Jong's time in the I.S. proved short lived, as Debord dismissed her in 1962, but her engagement with situationism continued. Now residing in Paris, France, she founded the English-language magazine The Situationist Times, which she designed, edited, printed, and distributed from 1962 to 1967. With her first solo show and her participation in a Gruppe SPUR exhibition, the year 1962 also marked the beginnings of de Jong's professional art career. Through the 1960s, she exhibited paintings, sculptures, and drawings largely in the Netherlands, Denmark, and France. Involved in the politics of the day, de Jong participated in the May 1968 protests, and printed posters in support of the students on strike. In 1970, after the end of her relationship with Jorn, de Jong moved back to Amsterdam with gallerist Hans Brinkman to pursue her painting career.

The Situationist Times

The Situationist Times was a periodical in six issues published in Europe between 1962 and 1967 that blended situationist theory, political commentary, conceptual art, and avant-garde aesthetics.

The movement Internationale situationniste (I.S.) emerged out of the Internationale lettriste and the International Movement for an Imaginist Bauhaus in 1957, largely under the leadership of Guy Debord. The ideas of the group were embodied in the French-language journal Internationale situationniste, but did not have an English-language outlet. Disagreeing with Debord over the expulsion of the German Gruppe SPUR from the I.S. and over the role of visual arts in situationism, de Jong began publishing The Situationist Times shortly after he excluded her from the group.

Article contributions for the magazine came from practitioners of a range of disciplines active across Europe. With de Jong's original drawings, collages, and selections of photographic reproductions, the magazine's visual content reflected her artistic vision. The first issue, co-edited with French author Noël Arnaud, was released in May 1962 and focused heavily on Gruppe SPUR. De Jong, Arnaud, and Danish-Belgian artist Serge Vandercam co-edited the second issue, which was published in September 1962. The third issue, dated January 1963, was edited and published solely by de Jong, and printed in her home town of Hengelo, Netherlands. Articulated around the themes of knots, interlaces, and topology, it was the first in a thematic series. The subsequent issues were published and distributed by the Danish publishing company Rhodos. No. 4, released in October 1963, was the "labyrinths" issue, and no. 5, released in December 1964, was the "rings and chains" issue. Both were created in collaboration with English-born artist Gordon Fazakerley. Released in 1967, no. 6, the last published issue, exclusively contained original lithographs from 32 artists. De Jong planned a seventh issue on the theme of "wheels", but never completed it.

Scope and Contents

The collection consists of correspondence, writings, printed materials, subject files, photographs and other papers relating to the life and work of Jacqueline de Jong from 1955 to 1983, with the bulk of the materials dating from the 1960s. The production of de Jong's magazine The Situationist Times is extensively documented through voluminous correspondence with co-editors, contributors, and publishers, as well as through production materials such as article submissions, original maquettes and distribution lists.

The collection offers rich documentation of the European avant-garde of the period thanks to de Jong's connections with the Internationale situationniste (I.S.), Gruppe SPUR, and the Danish situationists. Correspondents include the artists and writers Noël Arnaud, Guy Atkins, Pol Bury, Guy Debord, Gordon Fazakerley, Asger Jorn, Dieter Kunzelmann, Jørgen Nash, and H. P. (Hans-Peter) Zimmer. De Jong's subject files include tracts, manifestos, and periodicals issued by I.S. and Gruppe SPUR, as well as manuscript notes from the 1961 Göteborg Conference and materials relating to early situationist exhibitions. Original writings by Asger Jorn and Guy Atkins are also present.

The papers also include correspondence with gallery owners and original artists' books created by de Jong that offer some documentation of her early artistic career beyond her involvement with situationist groups.

Arrangement

Organized into seven series: I. Correspondence, 1955-1976. II. The Situationist Times Records, 1962-1970. III. Writings, 1962-1983. IV. Subject Files, 1957-1979. V. Professional Papers and Personal Papers, 1962-1975. VI. May 2022 Acquisition, 1970-1978. VII. October 2022 Acquisition, 1970.

Collection Contents

Series I: Correspondence, 1955–1976

4.8 linear feet (12 boxes)

Series I. Correspondence contains incoming and outgoing letters documenting de Jong's creative work and personal life from the late 1950s to the mid-1970s. De Jong's correspondence includes substantial discussions of the creation and distribution of The Situationist Times that complement the production materials found in Series II. The Situationist Times Records.

While incoming letters constitute the bulk of the correspondence, a substantial amount of outgoing letters, largely in the form of carbon copies and often without full identification of the addressees, is extant in the collection. Identifiable outgoing letters have been placed after incoming letters in named folders, and unidentified or partially-identified letters are at the end of the each subseries.

Series I is organized into two subseries: General Correspondence, and Family Correspondence.

General Correspondence 3.96 linear feet (10 boxes)

1959–1976

General correspondence offers rich documentation of de Jong's artistic, professional, and personal networks, with a particular emphasis on the making of The Situationist Times. Correspondents include visual artists, writers, architects, gallery owners, printers, publishers, and friends residing across Europe, in addition to a handful of correspondents based in the Americas. Reflecting de Jong's transnational network, the correspondence is in Dutch, English, French, German, and Danish, in addition to a few letters in Norwegian and Italian.

Correspondence with contributors to The Situationist Times illustrates de Jong's editorial process and places the magazine within a broader context of situationist and avant-garde thinking. Represented are co-editors Noël Arnaud, Serge Vandercam, and Gordon Fazakerley, as well as most of the artists, writers, and theorists who wrote pieces published by de Jong, such as Danish artist Asger Jorn, Belgian sculptor Pol Bury, French surrealist artist Max Bucaille, Belgian artist Pierre Alechinsky, Berlin-based intellectual Rodolphe Gasché, French architect and engineer David Georges Emmerich, and Dutch theoretical mathematician H. C. Doets. Due the romantic relationships de Jong forged with Asger Jorn and Pol Bury, correspondence with them is particularly voluminous and covers both professional and personal topics. Also of note is the voluminous correspondence between de Jong and employees of the Danish publishing company Rhodos, especially Erik Johannesen and Niels Blaedel, who acted as publisher and distributor of issues no. 4-6. The letters trace the friendship, working relationship, and financial disputes between Rhodos and de Jong.

Correspondence with the founding figure of the Situationniste Internationale Guy Debord, with Danish leaders of the Second Situationist International Jørgen Nash and Jens Jørgen Thorsen, and with German members of Gruppe SPUR Lothar Fischer, Dieter Kunzelmann, H. P. (Hans Peter) Zimmer, and Heimrad Prem, provides further context for Jong's work with The Situationist Times, and highlights the intersections and disagreements between several contemporary avant-garde groups.

Finally, the subseries also comprises correspondence from the 1960s with gallery owners, largely based in Northern Europe, regarding exhibitions of de Jong's artwork in the initial years of her artistic career. Also represented are collectors, like Hanns Sohm and Jon Nicholas Streep, and museum curators seeking to acquire copies of the magazine or other artwork, as well as other artists and architects in de Jong's professional network that were not associated with situationism.

Series II: The Situationist Times Records, 1962–19702.29 linear feet (6 boxes)

Series II. The Situationist Times Records documents the production of de Jong's magazine and, to a lesser extent, its distribution. Extent documents vary for each of the six published issues, but generally include research notes and outlines, source material for collages, article submissions, original maquettes, and distribution lists. Source material to be reproduced in the magazines comprises copies of archival photographs of historic buildings and museum objects, original photographs by de Jong, and magazine and newspaper clippings. Unless noted otherwise, the texts submitted to de Jong for publication in the magazine and contained in this series are generally typescripts with little to no editorial corrections. The series also includes materials to be included in a seventh issue of the magazine on the theme of "Wheels", which was never published, as well as general notes, clippings, administrative documents, and financial records pertaining to the magazine.

Box 31: Restricted fragile material. Reference surrogates have been substituted in the main files. For further information consult the appropriate curator.
